Lake county is to have a new golf course, located three miles west of Waukegan and covering 200 acres of ground. A 40 acre tract of land adjacent to the proposed golf course is to be subdivided and sold strictly for residential purposes. The golf course and subdivision will be on the land known as the Joseph Harry Gould farm, according to Waukegan reports, which say a deal was closed last week for the sale of the land. The consideration is reported to be $75,000.

An automobile of Chicago folks one day last week drove out Milwaukee avenue and proceeded to help themselves of some choice blues at the farm of John E. Barrett, south of Half Day. When Mrs. Barrett made objections, some of the members of the party became rather abusive. They were stopped at Wheeling by officers and held until Marshal Lumberg went to that place with warrants for the whole party. He brought them back here and all were arraigned before Police Magistrate O. A. Newsom, where they gave the names of J. E. Mulhern, Sr., J. E. Mulhern, Jr., F. Mulhern, Mrs. Frank Mulhern, Mrs. Louise Mulhern, Mrs. A. J. Gordon. The women of the party were released and the men were fined $10 each. All the men are members of the Chicago police department and said they understood they had permission to pick the flowers. The fines were suspended by the police magistrate.

An election will be held in Community High School district No. 159, which comprises Hebron township and adjacent territory, Saturday, June 7, at the town hall. The election is held to give the voters of the district an opportunity to vote on the proposition as to whether they desire a new building has so long been advocated by practically every well meaning citizen of the community that it is practically certain that the proposition will go over big. Most people want proper school facilities.

John Hayden of St. Louis, was here last week attending to the settlement of $4,000 damages he was recently awarded by the state supreme court in his action against the Carey Electric & Milling Company of Wilmot. It will be remembered that Mr. Hayden was laid up in Burlington hospitals for many months a few years ago, with severe burns he had received at Camp Lake from live electric wires torn down during a storm. His case was originally tried in Judge Belden's court and a jury verdict gave him $4000 damages. Judge Belden, however, set aside the verdict and entered judgement for the Carey Electric Co. The plaintiff then appealed to the state supreme court, which only a few weeks ago reversed Judge Belden's decision and ordered settlement to be made by the Wilmot concern to Mr. Hayden.

The attempt of Burlington to have their mail delivered by electric railway from Milwaukee does not meet with favor from postal officials. "The cost of delivery is prohibitory," according to a letter received by H. R. Pruemmer acting postmaster.

Louis J. Cernocky, proprietor of a soft drink parlor at Fox Lake Grove, was assessed fines totalling $1500 on Monday by Judge Edward D. Shurtliff in McHenry county Circuit court for violations of the national prohibition law. Cernocky pleaded guilty to four counts.

Ceremonies John L. Taylor, Libertyville, has received a cablegram from Hawaii, where his nephew, Truman S. Taylor, a former Libertyville resident was killed in a violent volcano explosion stating the remains would be shipped to Libertyville. The body is expected to arrive in Libertyville about June 5. Taylor, who was a bookkeeper at Pahala, met his death in an explosion in the crater of Kilauea volcano on the Island of Hawaii. He was struck by a rock which fell some 1,800 feet from the crater.

C. K. Anderson of Chicago is visiting Miss Leila Williams.

A. G. Watson was visiting with his family over the week end.

Dr. Roy Williams of Rockford is visiting at his home here this week.

The Misses Elsie, Laura and Ruth Williams were at the home of their parents Sunday and Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Ray of Waukegan spent Decoration day with relatives here.

The railroad brought out last Saturday one of the largest Decoration day crowds ever brought to the lake resorts. Various estimates place the number at 150 who got off at Antioch. A rally of the Epworth League of the Antioch sub-district will be held at Grayslake next Saturday afternoon and evening. It is expected that several from Antioch will attend.

The Antioch high school commencement exercises which were held in the opera house last Saturday evening, were in every way a fitting close to the school year, not only in the large crowd that filled the hall but the exercises which were unusually interesting.

Memorial day was fittingly observed in Antioch on Monday in spite of the cold and windy day and the spirit of '61 was predominant in the hearts of the veterans. The Antioch veterans, drum corps, secret organizations and school children started from the M. E. church at 9:30 o'clock and marched to the cemetery where the graves of the departed heroes were decorated. The entire parade then marched to the depot to receive the members of Luther Crane Post and the ladies of the Relief Corps of Burlington, numbering between thirty and forty veterans and their friends to the number of one hundred, accompanied by a brass band. As the train pulled into the station they were received with ringing cheers, and forming in line were escorted to the M. E. church where the ladies of the Antioch Hillside Cemetery society served the dinner. On account of the cold weather the services in the afternoon were held at the church instead of the grove.

'64, for it is you who go in and out of the world. And what is the essence of his attitude? Just this: the firm belief that men are men and not animals; that they are all born to serve but not to be slaves,—one class to another; that the greatest among men is he who through all these states, who are meeting today to honor the glorious dead and are allowed their due freedom; that to pay respect to their few remaining sacrifices of the best may be necessary. Business was pretty good over the holidays considering the weather.

Last season there was about three teams ready to play ball every Thursday evening. This year it is about all you can do to scrape enough for a good old game of scrub.

Joseph Westlake was born in Somersetshire, England, Aug. 1851. At the age of four years with his parents he came to this country and settled in Lake county on what is now the Joseph Labdon farm.

In 1874 Mr. Westlake married Martha Hunter, and they in 1877 went to Gudie Rock, Nebraska, where Mr. Westlake engaged in business. They returned in 1896 to Antioch on account of the ill health of Mrs. Westlake, from which she soon succumbed. In 1910 Mr. Westlake was married to Clara Fowles of Somersetshire, England, and from this union were two children Martha and Fannie. Mr. Westlake, on his return from the south this spring contracted a cold from which developed pneumonia. He passed away Sunday, May 25. He was buried in Antioch Hillside cemetery with a Masonic funeral.

And we would imitate you. We would love our country and our Conthat, no matter what evils break ideals crop up amongst us, we should see through them all the figure of exists, whether in the cotton-fields of men and women—wherever evil ty-duty. Children, do what is right.

of those veterans of '64 who followed the flag where righteousness led.

Lawlessness and greed can never make us slaves as long as we are trying to do what is right. They threat-them. Here, in the presence of our dead fathers, with bowed heads, we pause and pray:

"O God, thanks be to thee for thy thee that it may continue in freedom;

those thy servants, who having striv-

all, now rest from their battles. Make us younger Americans more like

of the Right, and strength to carry it out. To thy care and keeping we commend the souls of these thy servants, who have answered to thy roll-

A NOVEL OF THE FOOTHILLS

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—Transley's hay-cutting outfit, after stacking 2,000 tons, is on its way to the big Y.D. ranch headquarters. Transley is a master of men and circumstances. Linder, a German, is subaltern, but not a slave. Drak, George Drak, one of the men, is an irresponsible chap who proposes to every woman he meets. Transley and Linder are with Y.D., not his wife and daughter. Zen, Y.D.'s instructs Transley to eat the South Y.D., "spite o' h— an' high water" and fellow named Landson.

CHAPTER II.—Drak proposes to Zen and is partly rebuffed. He pitches camp on the South Y.D., and finds Landson's outfit cutting hay. Donnison Grant, Landson's manager, notifies Transley that he is working under a lease from the legal owners and warns Transley off. All of which means war.

CHAPTER III.—Zen and Y.D. are natural vamps, not yet halter-broke and ripe for mating. Y.D. has taken a liking to Transley. Zen holds Transley off and encourages Linder.

CHAPTER IV.—Zen enjoys the prospect of a race between Transley and Linder for her favor, but secretly hates both. She is more than half-mad, more serious encounter with Drak. Y.D. mowing machines are ruined by iron stakes set in the grass. Zen prevents open war with Landson. Transley half-way protects him and is turned off. Drak is forced to burn out the rival outfit.

CHAPTER V.—Fire blazes up in the lightning strike. The Y.D. outfit turns to Zen for help. Zen rides off alone to help. The wind changes and the Y.D. people now have to fight the prairie fire. Zen rides into the river to escape the flames. Drak tries to drown her. The drowning him—or thinks she has. Grant overtakes her. In trying to ride through fire Zen is thrown and knocked senseless.

"I'm sorry I bored you with that harangue," he said contritely. "You couldn't possibly be interested in it."

"On the contrary, I am very much interested in it," she protested. "It seems so much finer for a man to make his own way, rather than be lifted up by some one else. I am sure you are already doing well in the West. Some day you will go back to your father with more money than he has."

Grant uttered an amused little laugh. "There's no sign of it yet," he said. "A ranch hand, even a foreman, doesn't need any adding machine to count his wages. Besides, I am getting other things that are more worth having."

"What other things?"

"Why, this life—it's freedom, its confidence. And health! When one's soul is a-tingle what does all the rest matter?"

"But you need money, too," she added, thoughtfully. "Money is power; it is a mark of success. It would open up a wider life for you. It would bring you into new circles. Some day you will want to marry and settle down, and money would enable you to meet the kind of women—"

She stopped, confused. She had plunged further than she had intended.

"You're all wrong," he said amusedly. It did not even occur to Zen that he was contradicting her. She had not been accustomed to being contradicted, but then, neither had she been accustomed to men like Donnison Grant, nor to conversations such as had developed. She was too interested to be annoyed.

"You're all wrong, Miss—?"

"I don't wonder that you can't fill in my name," she said. "Nobody knows Dad except as Y.D. But I heard you call me Zen—"

"That was when you were coming out of your unconsciousness, I apologize for the liberty taken. I thought it might recall you—"

"Well, I'm still coming out," she interrupted. "I am beginning to feel that I have been unconscious for a very long time indeed."

Grant was aware of a pleasant glow excited by her frank interest. She was altogether a desirable girl.

"I have observed," he said, "that poor people worry over what they haven't got, and rich people worry over what they have. It is my disposition not to worry over anything. As for opening up a wider life, what wider life could there be than this which I—which you and I—are living?"

She wondered why he had said "you and I." Evidently he was wondering too, for he fell into reflection. She changed her position to ease the dull pain in her ankle, which his talk had almost driven from her mind. The rock had a perpendicular edge, so she let her feet hang over, resting the injured one upon the other. He was sitting in a similar position. The silence of the night had gathered about them, broken occasionally by the yapping of coyotes far down the valley. Segments of dull light fringed the horizon; the breeze was again blowing from the west, mild and balmy. Presently one of the segments of light grew and grew. It was as though it were rushing up the valley. They watched it, fascinated; then burst into laughter as the orb of the moon became recognizable. . . . There was the fire did not by any means imply permanent peace. Far from it, with the valley in ruins.

Y.D. was stiffening, but his daughter averted what would in another moment have been an embarrassing situation with quick remark.

"This is no time, even for explanations," she said, "except that Mr. Grant saved my life last evening at the risk of his own, and has lost a night's sleep for his pains."

"That was a man's work," said Y.D. It would not have been possible for his lips to have framed a greater compliment. "I'm obliged to you, Grant. You know how it is with us cattlemen; we run mostly to horn and hoofs, but I suppose we have some heart, too, if you can find it."

They shook hands with as much cordiality as the situation permitted, and then Zen introduced Transley and Linder, who were in the party. There were two or three others whom she did not know, but they all shook hands.

"What happened, Zen?" said Transley, with his usual directness. "Give us the whole story."

Then she told them what she knew, from the point where she had met Grant on the fire-enclosed hill.

"Two lucky people—two lucky people," was all Transley's comment. Wardis could not have expressed the jealousy he felt. But Linder was not too shy to place his hand with considerable pressure upon Grant's shoulder.

"Good work," he said, and with two words sealed a friendship.

Two of the unnamed members of the party volunteered their horses to Zen and Grant, and all hands started back to camp. Y.D. talked almost garrulously; not even himself had known how heavily the hand of Fate had lain on him through the night.

"The haymakin' is all off, Darter," he said. "We will trek back to the Y.D. as soon as you see fit. The steers will have to take chances next winter."

The girl professed her fitness to make the trip at once, and indeed they did make it that very day. Y.D. pressed Grant to remain for breakfast, and Tompkins, notwithstanding the demoralization of equipment and supplies effected by the fire, again excelled himself. After breakfast the old rancher found occasion for a word with Grant.

"You know how it is, Grant," he said. "There's a couple of things that ain't explained, an' perhaps it's as well all round not to press for opinions. I don't know how the iron stakes got in my meadow, an' you don't know how the fire got in yours. But I give you Y.D.'s word—which goes at par except in a cattle trade—and Y.D. laughed cordially at his own limitations—"I give you my word that I don't know any more about the fire than you do."

"And I don't know anything more about the stakes than you do," returned Grant.

"Well, then, let it stand at that. But mind," he added, with returning heat, "I'm not committing myself to anything in advance. This grass'll grow again next year, an' by heavens if I want it I'll eat it! No son of a sheep herder can bluff Y.D.!"

Grant did not reply. He had heard enough of Y.D.'s boisterous nature to make some allowances.

"An' mind I mean it," continued Y.D., whose chagrin over being baited out of a thousand tons of hay overrode, temporarily at least, his interpretation of Grant's services. "Mind, I mean it. No monkey-doodles next season, young man."

Obliviously Y.D. was becoming worked up, and it seemed to Grant that the time had come to speak.

"There will be none," he said, quietly. "If you come over the hills to cut the South Y.D. next summer I will personally escort you home again."

Y.D. stood open-mouthed. It was preposterous that this young upstart foreman on a second-rate ranch like Landson's should deliberately defy him.

"You see, Y.D.," continued Grant, with provoking calmness. "I've seen the papers. You've run a big bluff in this country. You've occupied rather more territory than was coming to you. In a word, you've been a good bit of a bully. Now—let me break it to you gently—those good old days are over. In future you're going to stay on your side of the line. If you crowd over you'll be pushed back. You have no more right to the hay in this valley than you have to the hide on Landson's steers, and you're not going to cut it any more, at all!"

Y.D. exploded in somewhat ineffectual profanity. He had a wide vocabulary.

The girl had slept soundly, almost without stirring. Now he must wake her. He shook her gently, and called her name; her eyes opened; he could see them, strange and wondering, in the thin gray light. Then, with a sudden start, she was quite awake.

"I have been sleeping!" she exclaimed, reproachfully. "You let me sleep!"

"No use of two watching the moon," he returned, lightly.

"But you shouldn't have let me sleep," she reprimanded. "Besides, you had to stay awake. You have had no sleep at all!"

There was a sympathy in her voice very pleasant to the ear. But Grant could not continue so delightful an indulgence.

"I had to wake you," he exclaimed. "There are several people riding up the valley; undoubtedly a search party. I must attract their attention."

They listened, and could now hear the hoofbeats close at hand. Grant called; not a loud shout; it seemed little more than his speaking voice, but instantly there was silence, save for the echo of the sound rolling down the valley. Then a voice answered, and Grant gave a word or two of directions. In a minute or two several horsemen limped up through the vague light.

"Here we are," said Zen, as she distinguished her father. "Gone lame on the off foot and held up for repairs!"

Y.D. swung down from his saddle. "Are you all right, Zen?" he cried, as he advanced with outstretched arms. There was an eagerness and relief to his voice which would have surprised many who knew Y.D. only as a shrewd cattleman.

Zen accepted and returned his embrace, with a word of assurance that she was really nothing the worse. Then she introduced her companion.

"This is Mr. Donnison Grant, foreman of the Landson ranch, Dad."

Grant extended his hand, but Y.D. hesitated. The true occasioned by the fire did not by any means imply permanent peace. Far from it, with the valley in ruins.

"You were very good to me; very decent," she continued.

At that moment Transley, Linder and Y.D. appeared, with two horses.

"Linder will ride over with you and bring back the spare henet," said Y.D.

Grant shook hands, rather formally, with Y.D. and Transley, and then with Zen. She murmured some words of thanks, and just as he would have withdrawn his hand, he took her fingers tightly very firmly about his. He answered the pressure, and turned quickly away.

Transley immediately struck camp, and Y.D. and his daughter drove homeward, somewhat painfully, over the blukened hills.

The following is an extract taken from the Portland Canal News of Northwestern British Columbia, of May 16, 1924. Frederick Dorey, Wm. Murphy and Samuel Fry burned to death. The district mourns.

Three towns combine in great public funeral for victims. This has been the saddest week in the history of the Portland Canal district. Three of the most popular residents of this section lost their lives in such a terrible manner as to stir the entire population of three communities and then arouse a demonstration of affectionate memory as has never before been witnessed here, and probably never will be again. Frederick Dorey, Samuel Fry and Wm. Murphy left Hyder, Alaska, May 5, on a trip to Thumb Creek. They expected to be gone three days. Thumb Creek enters Salmon river from the west side, about six miles north of Hyder. Opposite its mouth was a flimsy shack that Murphy has constructed at odd times with a variety of materials, to act as a shelter if required on his many trips up and down the valley. It was in the ruins of this shack that the charred bodies of the three men were found on the morning of Sunday, May 11, by one of Murphy's partners in various mining properties, Mrs. Margaret Tobley, Jack Woods and William Harner, who went up on horses to investigate. According to all information available the men had come to the shack very tired, built a big fire and retired, Dorey and Fry sleeping in a double bunk near the door, and Murphy in a corner at the rear. Around the stove was piled a stack of wood. The inside of the shack was lined with tar paper. The wood evidently started to blaze and the tar paper, which had been heated almost to the melting point evidently burned with suddenness approaching the action of an explosion, the smoke suffocating the victims before they could hardly make an effort to save themselves. United States Commissioner Sandford of Hyder was notified and immediately went to the scene of the tragedy where he held an inquest with a jury composed of employees of the Riverside mine which is located about a mile distant. The verdict returned was that of accidental death. The time it was impossible to accurately determine. Dorey's watch had stopped at 10 minutes of 10 o'clock and Jack Woods, who made a second trip to the scene could find no evidence that the men had been across to Thumb Creek and it was satisfied that death occurred the first night after they left Hyder. Mr. M. R. Jamieson has been appointed temporary administrator of the three estates. Joint funeral services were held in the Pioneer hall, Hyder, on the afternoon of May 15, under the auspices of the Moose and Elks lodges, the International Service club and the Stewart Tennis club. Rev. F. E. Reddick of the Methodist Episcopal church, Hyder, made a short and impressive address, paying a touching tribute to the many qualities and good citizenship of the departed and stressing the esteem in which they were held by their fellow citizens and associates in all walks of life. The service opened with the hymn "As Thou Will" sung by the combined choirs of the Methodist church of Hyder and the Stewart St.

Mark's Anglican church directed by Mrs. Reddick. Three other hymns, "Nearer My God To Thee," "Lead Kindly Light" and "Abide With Me," were rendered, the last as the cortage were leaving the hall. The floral tributes were beautiful and numerous. All business houses of Stewart and Hyder, B. C. and Hyder, Alaska, were closed at one o'clock on the afternoon of the funeral and between 400 and 500 residents of the three communities attended the obsequies, a large portion of them following the bodies to their last resting places in the Hyder cemetery. About half of these found places in the thirty auto vehicles in attendance (all there are in this section), the balance making the sad journey on foot. Twenty-four pall-bearers participated. Frederick Dorey was born in Dorset, England, July 4, 1895. He is survived by his mother who resides in London, England, two brothers, Robert of New York state, Bert of Malto, one sister in Manitoba, another sister in Egypt and Mrs. Ambrose Runyard of near Antioch, Ill. Fred served overseas in the World war as flight Lieutenant in the United States air forces and still retained his commission on the reserve list. Soon after arriving in Hyder he established the "Dorey Transfer" the pioneer business of this kind in Hyder. He was associated in the Hyder Dock company and certain mine properties. He was a member of the Moose and Elks lodges and the International Service club. The passing of Fred Dorey comes as a personal sorrow to the young people of Salem and Trevor communities where he had resided for several years before going to Alaska in 1920.

IN MEMORIUM

Some things are hard to realize, perhaps the hardest of these is the fact that intimate friends those with whom we have for years come in close contact and have taken into the circle of affection in our hearts reserved for nearest and dearest, have suddenly passed to another sphere, and that we shall see them no more. The death of Fred Dorey, Sam Fry and Will Murphy leaves a vacancy in our community life, as well as a void in our personal collection of real friends that will be hard to fill. Each or course had his circle of closest chums, those for whom the feeling of warm affection flowed the most freely but all possessed the collective esteem of all residents in this section. It is some consolation to know that the manner of their death precluded any suffering on their part. They died instantaneously, therefore, painlessly. What happened to their bodies after their souls had departed was of no moment to them; but things visible to us cause suffering on our part that they cannot possibly feel. The surviving members of their families we assure that although they could not be there in person to witness the last sad rites for their departed, they were well represented by practically all the residents of the three communities, mourning for

THE Public Service Company of Northern Illinois has been awarded the Charles A. Coffin Medal "in recognition of its distinguished contribution during 1923, to the development of electric light and power for the convenience of the public and the benefit of the industry."

This medal, prized in the electric industry as the symbol of distinguished achievement, is awarded annually by the Charles A. Coffin Foundation to the electric utility company making the greatest progress within the year.

While the winning of this medal is a great honor to this Company, its employees and to the great family of stockholders, it is at the same time a tribute to the wonderful territory the Company has the privilege of serving.

Without the co-operation of the progressive people living in Northern Illinois, the Company could not have carried out the program of service which attracted to it the Charles A. Coffin Award.

The constructive relationship between the Company and those whom it serves is so firmly established that when you talk about the progress of the Public Service Company you talk about the progress of Northern Illinois.

Brinkman for a most enjoyable ride through the lakes and channels up the Fox river to the picnic grounds where we were joined by several loads and the lunches were spread on the bank of the river.

After lunch all lined up to have their share of the delectable ice cream and home made cakes. Then a ball game took place and many races for parents and children and for each race an appropriate prize. E. Brinkman won the prize for foot race. About 50 were present to enjoy every minute of the day and return home by auto and boat to tell their friends what a wonderful time they had had and to look forward to the same pleasure next year. Thanking Billy Majestic for his kindness.

Henry Peterson, Deerfield motorcycle policeman, while pursuing a speeder a week ago Saturday evening on the Waukegan road, was caught between a truck and a touring car, breaking his leg. It was first reported that he had fractured his skull, but later reports contradicted the statement. He was taken to the Highland Park hospital. Peterson is the third motor cop in this district to break his leg in three weeks.

SHERIFF MAKES RAID AND SEIZES COMPLETE BREWERY

Sheriff Ahlstrom and a big force of deputies swooped down on what is known as the Mary Meloy farm, about three miles northeast of Libertyville, a week ago Wednesday night, and found a complete plant for the manufacture of the amber fluid of pre-Volstead days.

They found about fifty cases of the foam bedecked beverage all ready for delivery to thirsty patrons for Memorial day but there will be thirsty cotton spitting gentry for some days to come, as the sheriff heartlessly loaded the beer and the apparatus for making same into trucks and hauled it off to his private storage vault in Waukegan. There also was was about fifty gallons not quite ready for use.

Joe Miskus, who enjoys the reputation of being some bootlegger in the holy town of North Chicago and Waukegan, and one Joe Davilg, who engages in the lawful occupation of taxi cab driving in Waukegan, were found in charge of the brewery. They were taken along with their product and placed in the county jail.

It is said the sheriff secured more booze and the paraphernalia for making same in this raid than in all the raids pulled off in the county combined before this time.

LAKE COUNTY STEERS TOP
YEARLING MARKET AT CHICAGO

Hawthorne Farms, owned by Mr. Samuel Insull, gas and traction magnate of Chicago, received the top price paid for yearling steers when a shipment of fat Herefords realized $10.50 per hundredweight, May 27. This was the only consignment of yearlings to bring the price, bulk of cattle of their class selling from $1.00 to $3.00 lower per cwt. This Lake County Farm of Mr. Insull has gained quite a distinction for producing market toppers, having frequently registered among the high sales on the Chicago market. The 35 head were western branded whitefaces that averaged 1,003 pounds in weight.

Is the World Growing Better?

If you were to read the first nine verses of the forty-seventh chapter of the book of Ezekiel you would come across a very positive idea which the prophet had about the certainty and power of the coming of the Kingdom of God. The very heart of all prophecy was the hope of a better world, and the heart of that hope was an infinite faith in God. Because God is in His universe, all shall be well with the world. This was the faith of Jesus. He knew evil, and saw the weakness of human nature, but to his last breath he was an optimist. We can have no patience with one who is optimistic because, like the ostrich, he hides his head from evil. It is entirely different to look the evil and the imperfect square in the face, and then, because we believe that God is great enough to run the universe, to take our places with the great prophets of all time in the battle for a better world, with the sure faith that our labors shall not be in vain.

A pessimist met an optimist one morning, and began bemoaning the bad that is in the world. Finally he ejaculated, "I believe that I could make a better world myself." The other met him with a smile of assurance as he said, "Certainly, that is what we are here for." As we look out upon the world and try to find our place in it, we may choose whether we shall work with men of faith or men of dispair. The world has enough people of small faith now.

Just a few days ago some one was going up and down our streets trying to sell you some books, on the theory of dispair—the theory that God has made a real mistake, and can not succeed in producing a decent world, and that He never will. No, He has despaired, and has decided to snatch a few of the elect as brands from the burning, and to send the rest to Hell. Jesus said, "If I be lifted up, I will draw all men unto me." These people think Jesus was deluded. Someone may have bought those books.

I hope they will throw them away. I would like the job of advising them how to spend their good money, next time they want books. They might just as well have great books written by great souls—by men who think of God as Ruler here, instead of an unsuccessful opponent of the Devil. The prophets are not all dead, thank God.

But many people still follow the false prophets. As Charles Bureas Ketchem put it,

"All flesh is Grass," the lying prophet cried, "And hope is vain that we shall ever view A better world; 'tis evil that men do," The certain prophet of the Lord replied,

"Thou speakest false! Thou art a blinded guide!

For spite of with'ring grass and evils new,

This like a rock eternal standeth true God lives! And He shall reign, whate'er betide."

Today we hear the voice of those who say

That "peace will never come" that brotherhood, Which seeks to draw all men within its sphere

"Is but a snare for fools." O God, we pray,

Raise up to us a prophet wise and good,

To speak Thy word of Promise without fear.

Some people think the world is growing worse because their sense of sin is more keen than is used to be. Each year they better understand what is sin. The world is growing smaller, ton, in the same day we ready about the murder in California, of History will provide ample substantiation to our faith. God needs us as partners in making it better. That is our task in Antioch.

Elmer Arnold, employed by a Chicago clothing manufacturing concern, testified in the circuit court, Waukegan, last week, he and Arthur Loeh, the man whose murdered body was found at Ingleside had purchased spirit for kings to start wars, that to the last war all of the powers tried to make out they were innocent of starting it. We find more and more of Union and cooperation among the bodies of the various sects and religions. We find the greatest expert

The hearing was on a temporary injunction closing Fletcher's place for money men that what the world needs most is not more money but law. Arnold declared that both he and Loeh became intoxicated from the liquor they bought from Fletcher who served the drunks himself.

Deputy Sheriff Harry Ahlstrom also testified to his going to the place to arrest Fletcher. In company with Arnold, who pointed out the place. Arguments on the injunction were continued until a later date.

Captain Berlin, a former Allendale boy, who saw service overseas in our late war, gave a short address. Rev. Mr. Wentworth of the local church also gave a short address. The Allendale band furnished music at the conclusion of the service, the boys and others marched to the cemetery where the soldiers' graves were decorated. Much credit is due to Captain Bradley and his boys for their public spirit.

Mrs. Tom Brompton, who went to the Victory Memorial hospital in Waukegan two weeks ago for an operation, passed away last Saturday evening. The operation had seemed to be successful, but her strength was not equal to the strain and there was no help. Mrs. Brompton has been an invalid for some time, but was always very patient and uncomplaining. Her husband, two daughters, Mabel and Ethel, and one son, Howard, survive. The funeral was held at the home on Tuesday afternoon, Rev. Wentworth conducting the services, and she was laid to rest in the Lake Villa cemetery. To the sorrowing family we extend our sympathy.

Time flew so rapidly that the closing bell came without warning. All adjourned to the basement and saw a comedy in two reels "The Fresh Heir." The purpose of this gathering is to promote a wholesome social life for all the family and to promote an intelligent, enthusiastic following of the principles of Jesus. Don't forget that these church nights come on the last Friday of each month.

Public Service Co. Wins Prize at Atlantic City

Atlantic City, May 22—The Public Service Company of Northern Illinois, in competition with all the electricity companies of the nation, has been awarded the Charles A. Coffin medal for 1923, symbolic of leadership among the electric light and power companies of the United States. The award was made last night at the annual convention of the National Electric Light Association.

Britton I. Budd, president of the honored company, in receiving the medal from President Walter A. Johnson, of the association, who also represented the Charles A. Coffin Foundation, said:

"While this is great honor to the company, to its employees and to the great family of stockholders, it is at the same time a tribute to the wonderful territory the company has the privilege of serving. Without the cooperation of the progressive people living in Northern Illinois, the company of this valuable variety. Ho had could not have accomplished the things which have brought honor not selling so-called Grimm again this spring considerably under the prices charged by reputable Grimm seed companies winning the Coffin Medal. Last year by President Johnson to F. N. Leonard for the Employees Mutual Benefit Association of the company.

This is the second time within a year that Northern Illinois has been honored by one of its utility companies winning the Coffin Medal. Last fall the Chicago North Shore and Milwaukee Railroad Company was a victor, it being named as the most progressive electric transportation company.

An intensive program of service to the public throughout the territory in which it furnishes electric light and power, the population of which is half a million widely scattered; the promotion of its employees' welfare; the building of organization efficiency, and the increase of customer stockholders were the particular achievements which led to the selection of the Public Service company of Northern Illinois to receive this signal honor.

During 1923 the company sought to improve its relations with its customers in several ways. It organized a staff of men to answer complaints by personal calls, doing away with the custom of answering by letter. It inaugurated the policy of furnishing standard sixty-watt lamps free in return for burned-out lamps, and it placed on exhibition three electric homes, one of which was visited by forty-six thousand persons.

The company organized during the year a department of public relations, the progressive advertising work of which succeeded in reducing the number of complaints, newspaper advertising, painted highway bulletins, colored posters, descriptive folders, motion pictures and the publication of an attractive year book constituted the publicity activities of the company.

For the benefit of its employees this company has an employee savings fund in which, at the end of five years, employees may receive their deposits in cash, plus compound interest, or in the common stock of the company; free life insurance up to $1,500 for employees in the service of the company six months, and additional insurance at low rates; an employee temporary loan plan and a service annuity providing for annual payments to retired employees of not less than $300.

The company believes it is the first electric public utility to co-operate with an educational institution for raising the standard of its personnel. It has an arrangement with the University of Illinois whereby it gives special supervision to graduates of the University's course in the economics of the utility industry, and extends the use of its plants for experimental work.

The employees are encouraged to accept responsibility as good citizens and the company is proud of the fact that among its employees one is a mayor, one is president of a Chamber of Commerce, several are Chamber of Commerce directors, one is president of a Kiwanis club, and one is chairman of a civic safety organization.

This company operates several generating stations and in 1923 it completed the first link in a proposed 132,000-volt interconnection between its larger stations.

In 1923 its stockholders numbered 21,000, a gain of 35 per cent over the previous year, and the number of its customers showed an increase of 18½ per cent.

The Illinois Commerce Commission graded the company at 93, with a record of 88 per cent of perfect service for the year, an increase of four per cent over the previous year.

FARM BUREAU NEWS

The alfalfa tour held last Thursday, crop. Cost account records, kept by Lake county farmers have shown conclusively that the alfalfa crop paid the best of oil, and was the most important crop in the cheap production of milk.

At Mr. Dietrich's farm we stopped to look at 70 head of steers he had been feeding about 40 days on silage, alfalfa and shock corn. They had made good gains and he expected to finish them out on grain for the August market.

At the L. A. Huson farm the practical results from feeding a home grown ration of alfalfa hay silage, ground barley, corn and bran were observed the bran only being purchased. From 24 cows he had averaged 18,000 pounds of milk per month, and the past few weeks since turning out on sweet clover pasture, his production increased from ten cans per day to thirteen cans without having any cows freshen either, again proving the practical value of sweet clover pasture.

Frank Ehret had 22 producing cows on sweet clover pasture that were producing 10 cans per day of milk. These were the cattle recently purchased from Barroo Co., Wisconsin, an accredited county, that showed less than ½ of 1% T. B. in cattle from the entire county on the last test.

B. A. Combs, whose herd was clean on the first test, showed the value of home grown feeds, also good breeding up to a grade herd.

Mr. Hackelmann gave a short talk also on the corn borer and the corn root and stalk rot diseases which were causing so much loss in central Illinois. He explained that on account of our careful rotations we use in Lake county, including much use of legumes, and the fact that most of our corn is put into the silo that we were not in such great danger from corn borer came our way from Ohio, where it now is, we would stand a much better chance of successfully fighting it, since most of the crop is removed from the fields where grown. This was good news for Lake county, and her balanced system of farming and dairying.

We hope that the next tour held will commend a large attendance of our farmers, as there is a lot to be gained by getting together on all these questions.

OVERWORK

When Uncle Zeke was forty-eight The neighbors used to say,

"It's lookin' pretty bad, of late,

He ought to learn to play.

A man toward fifty's past his prime,

He oughtn't to forget

If he keeps at it all the time.

Hard work will kill him yet."

When Uncle Zeke was sixty-two

The person shook his head,

"Ezekiel has too much to do;

"He's all worn out," he said,

"A man of family has no right

His health to disregard;

I fear he'll pass away some night,

He's working far too hard."

When Uncle Zeke was eighty-four,

Still toiling on his farm,

The boys around the country store

Were moved to grave alarm.

Said they: "He ought to drop the plow.

An' spend his time in bed;

He's worked too long already now,

Next year'll see him dead!"

Now Uncle Zeke is eighty-three

And works from rise of sun

Till dusk, then stays around to see

The evening milking done.

He's strong of limb and clear of eye,

No job he'll ever shirk,

And still the neighbor prophesy

He'll die of overwork.

Local Feeds for Young Steers. Fifty-six 2-year-old steers, averaging 729 pounds, were fed by a farmer of Perry county, Ala., under the direction of the county agricultural agent in 1923, as a demonstration in feeding methods for the information of the community. Feeds produced in the region were utilized in the feeding, a ration including blackstrap molasses, cottonseed meal, and hay that had been damaged in curling being used. The steers were of fair quality, mixed Shorthorn, Hereford, and Aberdeen-Angus grades produced on neighboring farms. They were turned on pasture form Oct. until Jan. 1, when they were put into feed lots and given a ration of corn, blackstrap molasses, cottonseed meal, and all the hay they would consume. From April 20 to June 20, they ran in a pasture and were fed some cottonseed meal and blackstrap molasses. The steers gained an average of 373 pounds and were sold at eight cents a pound on the farm, netting a good profit to the feeder.

FERTILE EGGS CAUSE LOSS TO FARMERS EVERY SUMMER

A large part of the loss caused by eggs spoiling in warm weather can be prevented by producing only fertile eggs during the late spring and summer. This loss, which is conservatively estimated at more than $15,000,000 a year, falls almost entirely on the producer. Not only does he lose the value of the eggs which spoil, but the producer suffers a further material loss in the reduction of the number of eggs consumed caused by people getting bad eggs among those they purchase.

This loss can be entirely prevented by producing only fertile eggs during warm weather. This is accomplished by taking all male birds out of the flock after the breeding season is over. The rooster has no influence on the number of eggs produced, and should either be morticated or killed—the meat can be canned—or he should be kept penned up.

The United States department of agriculture has just published a large poster showing the difference in the keeping qualities of fertile and infertile eggs during warm weather. This poster also gives simple rules for producing good quality eggs on farms during the later part of the spring, throughout the summer and into the early fall months.

Studebaker Finishes 2nd!

In this year's classic in the automobile world, the Memorial Day 500-mile race at Indianapolis, Earl Cooper, driving a Studebaker, finished second after leading the field for 400 miles. The Studebaker finished but a minute behind the leader, averaging more than 98 miles an hour, a speed never attained before in this event.

The race demonstrates the ability of Studebaker. The grueling test put on an engine to average better than 98 miles an hour for 500 miles is testimony enough.

When this grade of engine is placed into a car that meets the pocketbook of the average person what more can be asked.
